Niagara Falls is made up of three cascades: Horseshoe Falls, the biggest and most powerful, sits in Canada; the American Falls and Bridal Veil Falls are located in the United States. The water that cascades over Niagara Falls originates from four of the five Great Lakes, making its way via the Niagara River to the Atlantic Ocean.

Along the middle of the Niagara River runs the border between Canada and the United States, and to cross it many people like to take the Rainbow Bridge. At the point marking the border one can see the Canadian and US flags. Lots of people stop here to take selfies as they stand between the two countries. After I went through immigration at the US border, I proceeded on my way to the United States. As I first approached the cascades, the force of the water crashing down and the loud noise it made stopped me in my tracks. I was immediately amazed by this wonder of nature. No less exciting was sailing on the Maid of the Mist. Then I got off the boat and walked up a path next to the American Falls. Seeing it up close in all its glory was amazing. (9 Unit 11)
