I love my adopted cats—Shining, Spotie, and Mucho—very much. They are noble and beautiful and have never caused any trouble for me or my furniture. I cannot understand why some people shop for cats at pet stores instead of adopting them from animal shelters. Don't they know that pet stores cold-bloodedly force female cats and dogs to give birth to kittens and puppies? Buying animals from such stores actually supports this type of cruel behavior. By contrast, adopting a pet from a shelter saves a life because these animals are put to death if they stay at the shelter for a certain period. To survive, these little creatures need only a small space and food to eat. Moreover, after being adopted, they give you their unconditional love in return. So, don't buy a pet at a store. Adopt one instead!

He is sometimes also known as "Guan Yu" or "Guan Yun Chang." He is famous for helping his friend Liu Bei fight against the warlord* that stole power from the last Han emperor. Sadly, Guan Gong died in battle but was respected after his death for his honesty and loyalty to Liu Bei. It is also said that he helped the people of Yanshui in Tainan by saving them from a disease that had been wiping out the entire population. He is usually pictured with a red face and a long beard, and often seen carrying a weapon with a heavy blade* and a long pole in one hand. One of the shrines dedicated to Guan Gong is the Martial Rites Temple* in Tainan. He is worshipped in both large temples and small shrines throughout the country. Although Taiwan has many different gods, it's interesting to learn about the differences between each and every one of them.
