Part 6: Cloze (10%)

Choose the best answer to fill in each blank.

Paragraph A

Most animals have fur or feathers to protect themselves from the sun's rays; however, hairless animals are particularly at risk of sunburn. It's no surprise, (56), that many of these animals have developed their own adaptations to protect their skin. Pigs like to roll in the mud to prevent their skin from being damaged from (57) sunlight. Elephants throw sand on their backs and heads for use (58) a kind of natural sunblock. Hippos have developed a physical adaptation—they produce a red-colored substance around their eyes and ears that acts as a natural sunscreen by absorbing ultraviolet light. Whales, which spend a lot of time at the ocean surface, can (59) sunburn, too. So it's a good thing that blue whales have a special adaptation that allows their cells to (60) skin damage and prevents them from getting skin cancer easily.

Part 6: Short Passage Questions (10%)

Read each paragraph and answer the questions.

The world is full of amazing animals; however, roughly a million species are currently at risk of going extinct. Among them is the Andean Condor. The largest flying bird in the world, it has a wingspan of about 3.3 meters and can fly for up to 160 kilometers without flapping its wings, gliding on air currents for hours at a time. Today, there are only about 6,700 of these birds left. Andean condors feed primarily on rotting animal bodies—especially those of foxes and pumas, which are considered pests by the local farmers. To get rid of these pests, farmers use poison. The condors, in turn, eat the poisoned meat and often die too.

The horseshoe crab has existed for at least 445 million years. Its light-blue blood holds the key to detecting toxic elements in the drugs we use to heal ourselves. Every year, half a million horseshoe crabs are captured by drug companies, drained of their blood, and then returned to the ocean. Sadly, many of them die as a result of the bleeding procedure. How many more wonderful species must join the endangered list before we learn to treat the natural world with the respect it deserves?

- () 41. What is the main problem raised by the writer?
(A) Farmers use chemicals on crops and kill animals as a result.
(B) The cruelty of animal testing conducted by drug companies.
(C) Many species are in danger of disappearing from the face of the earth.
(D) There is nothing humans can do to prevent animals from disappearing.
- () 42. How does the Andean condor fly?
(A) It beats its wings quickly and constantly to fly at a high altitude.
(B) It flies by remaining at least 160 kilometers above the ground.
(C) It floats in the air without moving its wings for up to 160 kilometers.
(D) It needs to rest from time to time since flying consumes a lot of energy.
- () 43. Why are Andean condors dying?
(A) They are being directly killed by farmers.
(B) They are dying from eating poisoned meat.
(C) They usually eat animals that died of diseases.
(D) Foxes and pumas often feed on Andean condors.
- () 44. Which is NOT true about horseshoe crabs?
(A) They are mainly threatened by water pollution.
(B) They have an unusual blood color.
(C) They play a critical role in human health.
(D) They are an ancient species.
- () 45. What is the writer's tone in this passage?
(A) Shocked.
(B) Concerned.
(C) Hopeful.
(D) Excited.
