Part 6: Short Passage Questions (10%)

Read the paragraph and answer the questions.

Many people are confused about the benefits of eating breakfast. Which is true—should we or should we not make the morning meal a priority? According to one argument, eating breakfast improves our cognitive performance and helps us do better at work and on tests. Several studies have shown that people who did not eat breakfast were exhausted by noon and performed worse on cognitive tests than those who had breakfast. Furthermore, eating breakfast might even help us lose weight. When we eat breakfast, we feel less hungry later in the day, so we end up eating less. But whether or not we have breakfast is probably not the most important factor that affects our health. What’s important is to make breakfast and all our other meals as rich in nutrients as possible. That is the key to good health.

- ( ) 41. Which question is discussed in the passage?
 (A) Is breakfast an important meal?
 (B) What should we eat for breakfast?
 (C) What time should we eat breakfast?
 (D) How much should we eat for breakfast?
- ( ) 42. What benefit does eating breakfast bring us, according to one argument?
 (A) Having breakfast every day can protect us from diseases.
 (B) Eating breakfast improves our mood.
 (C) It makes us perform better at work and in school.
 (D) It helps us sleep better at night.
- ( ) 43. How can people who skip breakfast feel, according to many studies?
 (A) They feel hungry the whole day.
 (B) They get angry easily all the time.
 (C) They feel confused the entire day.
 (D) They get really tired by noon.
- ( ) 44. How can eating breakfast help us lose weight?
 (A) We feel less hungry later and end up eating less.
 (B) Our bodies burn calories faster in the morning.
 (C) We have more energy so that we exercise a lot.
 (D) Eating breakfast prevents us from eating lunch.

Part 6: Short Passage Questions (20%)

Read each paragraph and answer the questions.

Paragraph A

Jeans are often seen on fashion runways. How did jeans find their way into the world of high fashion? Once, they were worn almost exclusively by laborers, who needed pants that could withstand heavy wear and tear. In 1872, a tailor named Jacob Davis and a merchant named Levi Strauss applied metal rivets to the pockets and button fly of jeans and got a patent for their new creation—Levi's 501 jeans. In the 1930s, the image of a woman sporting a pair of Levi's appeared in Vogue magazine—a sign that it wouldn't be long before jeans entered mainstream fashion. By the 1950s, jeans had become part of popular culture, thanks to Hollywood actors like James Dean, whose leather jacket and denim jeans gave him a cool rebel image. It wasn't until the 1970s that expensive designer jeans hit the market. Today, the global jeans industry is worth over US$65 billion, as companies develop and expand their range of cuts, colors, and styles. Several brands have also begun to include eco-friendly materials and processes in their production. By virtue of such brands, future generations can enjoy these durable wardrobe essentials without having to choose between fashion and the environment.

- ( ) 46. Who wore jeans the most in the 19th century?
(A) Workers.
(B) Models.
(C) Women.
(D) Teens.

- ( ) 47. What was special about the first Levi's 501 jeans?
(A) They had metal rivets to secure the pockets.
(B) They had a label with the Levi's name.
(C) They were made for merchants to wear.
(D) They were designed by a tailor alone.

- ( ) 48. When did jeans begin to become a part of popular culture?
(A) The 1870s.
(B) The 1930s.
(C) The 1950s.
(D) The 1970s.

- ( ) 49. Why did the writer mention James Dean?
(A) To question whether or not James Dean was a rebel.
(B) To reveal what kind of image James Dean had.
(C) To discuss why jeans became Hollywood actors' favorite.
(D) To explain how jeans got the image of being cool.

- ( ) 50. What is true about jeans today?
(A) They're causing a lot of pollution to the environment.
(B) There are not many styles or cuts to choose from.
(C) They're not selling well, so the jeans industry is losing money.
(D) Many jeans are being made with eco-friendly material.

Paragraph B

Digital devices are a constant part of our lives. But with new conveniences come new dangers. For example, connecting to public Wi-Fi is risky. Hackers could set up rogue Wi-Fi networks disguised as free public Wi-Fi and harvest the data on our devices. To hack-proof our smartphone, we could use our phone's Internet connection or direct our traffic to a private network using a VPN tool. As for protecting our computer, using our smartphone as a hot spot is the safest bet. Another danger is juice jacking. This occurs when hackers install their own software on a public USB charging cable or port. When we plug in our devices we could allow hackers to steal our data. This can be prevented by not unlocking our phone. At home we use virtual assistants to control our appliances, but hackers can broadcast messages to them. What may sound like music coming from our devices could actually contain a hacker's instructions to our virtual assistants to place an order online or activate a video call. Twenty-first-century devices make our lives convenient but for every new device there's a hacker thinking of ways of accessing them. Therefore, we must be careful.

- ( ) 51. What do digital devices bring to our lives, according to the passage?
- (A) They make our lives easier and more comfortable.
  - (B) They bring fewer dangers to our lives.
  - (C) They allow us to make more friends.
  - (D) They give us more free time.
- ( ) 52. Why is using free public Wi-Fi risky?
- (A) Some public Wi-Fi networks aren't free.
  - (B) Free public Wi-Fi often asks users to sign in with our email address.
  - (C) Hackers could be nearby and see information on our phones.
  - (D) The free public Wi-Fi could actually be a hacker's Wi-Fi network.
- ( ) 53. How can we hack-proof our smartphone, according to the writer?
- (A) Use our phone as a hot spot.
  - (B) Make sure there are no hackers around.
  - (C) Use our own phone to connect to the Internet.
  - (D) Avoid connecting to the Internet while in public.
- ( ) 54. What is juice jacking?
- (A) A type of USB charging cable.
  - (B) A way for hackers to steal data.
  - (C) The name of a computer program.
  - (D) A method of hack-proofing our phone.
- ( ) 55. What is the problem with using virtual assistants?
- (A) They can take over our homes eventually.
  - (B) They could be made by hackers.
  - (C) Hackers could broadcast messages through them.
  - (D) People rely too much on them.
